

No selected options!

The implementation is straightforward. The blocking disk read function continuously calls scheduler dispatch if the disk is not ready. If the disk is ready then it calls `simpdisk::read` to take advantage of parent functions. The write function is identical to the read function implementation except calls `simpdisk::write` after the disk is ready.